Morgan is very laid back. I respect his style of teaching and grading, however I don't think it should be used for this class. Morgan is an awesome teacher & I'm sure more could be learned from him in higher level courses.

I came into this course thinking I would love it, I was very motivated and excited. Then, I met Morgan Benton, a very nice guy. His best advice if we did not know something was to google it. He encouraged us not to get a book. When he demonstrated things he would sit behind his computer and rattle off words that no one could relate to. He ~~does~~ ^{does} not cater to the students who do not know anything, which is the majority of students because this is a programming introduction course. He opted out of instructing the course in a room where everyone would have a computer to have an open discussion room. This created an atmosphere where the majority of everyone could not apply what little he showed us. Class time was a waste, especially the day he came in high. I have learned nothing this entire semester, wasted my time and Morgan Benton wasted my money when he didn't introduce me to any subject matter. I wish I just had some instruction and motivation because I was very interested.

I now am not interested and am very frustrated with Morgan Benton.

it is true that we should be motivated to learn intrinsically; however, I feel like this is a beginner course and there should be instruction. As a beginner, it was hard to figure out exactly what I wanted to do/learn. I feel like Wednesdays and Fridays weren't productive class time. I think instead of reviewing other people's code, we should have more time to work on our own projects. Also, I hated Subversion and didn't like how we had to put everything on the website. I feel like these caused more problems than they helped.
